I would be able to go out and get it | -Good Words. by making my horse wade in the stream. I had not heard of the quicksand.

"Pretty soon, as it did not come near the bank, I urged the animal out into the river. The horse would not go however, and neighed loudly I had made repeated efforts to get Dr. Burns of this city. He makes the horse out into the stream I gave the following statement: it up, and then thought that I would wade out and get the hat myself. It did not look deep.

with the animal. For I had struck the quicksand. It was the place where the gold is most to be found, and that and there is worth lots of money; but it did not seem to make any difference to me whether it was gold I was sinking in or just plain sand. It rose higher and higher on on me, and I felt that it was surely the end. But the luck was with me and I was pulled out by a chance passer on a horse, who threw a lariat over my shoulders. I thought that I was surely being cut in two by the lariat. But I was not, and I was pulled out after a while and got over my scare. That sand where I was is now worth millions of dollars, and I was literally drowning in gold, but it wasn't any fun, I can tell you."-Denver Republican.

Perhaps the most scathing of their observation against trains was that contained in the legend circulated by monk in the reign of Edward I: "I heard of a proud woman who wore a white dress with a long train which, trailing behind her, raised a dust even so far as the alter and the crucifix. But as she left the church and lifted up her train on account of the dust, a certain holy man saw the devil laughing, and, having asked him why, he replied: 'A companion of mine was just now sitting on the train of that woman, using it as a chariot; but when she lifted it up my companion was shaken into the dust, and so I laughed." We no longer believe in devils, either major or minor, but we believe in the propagation of disease by microbes and bacilli and the train of a woman's dress is the very devil's chariot for sonveying them .- Queen.

A movement has been started by the teachers in the public schools of Philadelphia to erect a monument to the memory of Lewis Elkin, who bequeathed nearly $2,000,000 as a pension fund for indigent teachers.
